Kai Christen

Kai's focus is to connect and support people and organizations who want to maximize their positive impact while enjoying life and staying relaxed and clear-headed. That's why he founded the Inside Out Movement.

Kai has conducted trainings and coachings for over 70 companies and has coached well over 1000 people. He is teaching the module Visionary Leadership at the Lucerne University of Applied Sciences and Arts.

Kai would love to live in a tiny house on wheels one day, enjoying a nice glass of red wine.

He stopped preparing for presentations. Find out how that it works today :)

Chantal Vroom

Chantal is a lifelong learner, communication trainer and story teller, who often quotes her Dutch down-to-earth-no-bullshit father for the many advices he gave her throughout life. She says she is a notorious small-fuckupper, with 'Clumsy' as her middle name. This has helped her to feel like an idiot very regularly with the advantage that for her, failing is always part of any learning process.

Her Motto: ABC - Always Be Curious!
Especially after a fuckup! :-)

Tobias Feitkenhauer

Tobias fell in love with educating young people during his studies of Arabic and Economics. Recognising the lack of relevant life skills in himself and many other university students, he knew he wanted to do something about it. In his final year of studies he got to know Teach First Deutschland, an organisation that promotes education equality in Germany. After graduation, he worked as Teach First Fellow at a community school in Heidelberg. There Tobias equipped socio-economically deprived students with the necessary skills and mindset to pass their final exams.

His insights from these two years fuelled his vision of a world in which every student takes charge to make a positive change in their communities.

Tobias is from a tiny village in northern Germany. He lived in New Zealand, Egypt and different places around Germany. He believes that opportunities knock on the door when you're on the right path.
